IN BRIEF

Situated in the pretty hamlet of Port Neuf on the River Boutonne in the sunny Charente Maritime region of south-west France, this barn has lovely views over the river.

The barn is built of stone it consists of a series of three 'rooms', each of which could be developed into two storeys. The roof was rebuilt in 2001, with new tiles, new felt, new roofing sheets, rafters, purlins and trusses. There are some original features, attractive stone window and door surrounds. Additional window and door openings could be made to make more use of the river views to the south. Permission has already been granted to convert the barn into a house. Water and electricity at the corner of the plot. The land between the barn and the River Boutonne is communal, offering space for picnics, recreation, and fishing...
