NOTES

DESCRIPTION

Roye, located in the Somme department in the Hauts-de-France region, is a city that benefits from a strategic geographical location. With coordinates of latitude 49.6988° N and longitude 2.7939° E, Roye is located at an average altitude of 88 meters. The city is easily accessible thanks to the A1 motorway, connecting the metropolises of Lille and Paris in about an hour, which represents a major asset for travel and economic development. Roye's surface area is 15.55 km², offering its residents and visitors a pleasant living environment, between urban and rural areas. Its proximity to the prefectures of Oise and Somme, located less than 45 kilometers away, further enriches its accessibility and connections. Roye is also surrounded by several picturesque villages, such as Carrépuis, Saint-Mard, and Roiglise, adding to the cultural and historical richness of the region. The town offers a variety of services and facilities, such as schools, leisure centres and sports facilities, to meet the needs of its residents. Roye's road map is designed to facilitate traffic and parking, with clear directions for public transport and cycle routes. For those wishing to explore Roye in more detail, detailed maps are available, offering satellite views, relief maps and information on local points of interest. These resources are invaluable to residents, visitors and business travellers alike, enabling efficient orientation and planning in and around the town. Roye, with its rich heritage and advantageous geographical position, continues to play an important role in the regional fabric...
