DESCRIPTION

Built around 1840, this beautifully proportioned, slate-roofed maison de maître, with adjoining outbuildings has undeniable and authentic charm.

The cement-tiled entrance hall leads on the left to a dining room with parquet flooring, fireplace and paneled walls, and on the right to a lounge with an open granite fireplace. The kitchen, accessible from either the hall or the dining room, has a window overlooking the garden. A room adjoining the living room could be used as a study or children's bedroom. Opposite the entrance hall, a door leads to the garden at the rear of the house.

A beautiful staircase leads to a landing with a bright master bedroom with an adjoining room (child's bedroom/dressing room), two further bedrooms and a shower room with toilet. The attic is suitable for conversion.

The dining room, lounge and bedrooms have retained their original parquet flooring and fireplaces. The roof (framework + roofing) of the house is in good condition and is regularly serviced. The electricity in the house (with the exception of the living room) has been brought up to standard and the meter is new.
