IN BRIEF

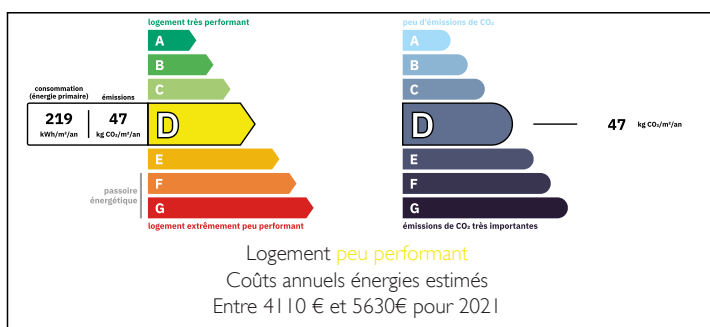

Nestled in an idyllic and peaceful setting, in the heart of a village with a rich historical past, this house was once a large hunting lodge, adjacent to the Château d'Argoules, dating from before the French Revolution. The estate, with its typical enclosed courtyard, includes original buildings such as the stables, the hunting kennel and the dovecote, which rises well above the other buildings.

It is the perfect place for a main residence or a gîte and tourist accommodation business. The second house is an authentic rustic stable, converted and fully restored.

The whole has been tastefully renovated, preserving many original features, including beams and an open fireplace.

Under certain conditions, the owner can leave the equipment and furnishings.
