DESCRIPTION

Just 35 kilometers from Perpignan, Banyuls-sur-Mer welcomes lovers of authentic Mediterranean nature in an idyllic setting, perfect for well-being and serenity.

Nestled between the sea and the mountains, this charming town lies at the foot of the Albères range, where the eastern Pyrenees meet the Mediterranean. Close to the Spanish border, Banyuls reveals a breathtaking natural landscape: a rugged coastline dotted with crystal-clear coves, and renowned hiking trails—most notably the GR10—winding through the surrounding hills.

Set slightly apart from the town center, on a gently sloping plateau shaded by pines and oaks, the Villas Vermeil blend harmoniously into their natural surroundings. Built in a cascading layout to make the most of the views, each villa offers spectacular panoramic vistas of the sea.

Four of the villas are grouped together, offering 3- to 4-room homes with garages, spread across two levels. The remaining seven, more spaced out, stretch across their own terraced plots, with sleek, modern architecture rising two to three stories. Every line, every material has been carefully chosen to enhance their seamless integration into the landscape.

High-quality materials—such as schist stone and ochre-red terracotta roof tiles—complement the soft beige of the textured plaster walls. Grey-brown railings pair beautifully with the large glass openings, giving the entire development a discreet elegance in perfect harmony with its natural setting.

A rich and diverse array of plant life completes the picture: new plantings, carefully landscaped hedges, and optional private pool areas for each villa all contribute to the unique charm of...
