NOTES

DESCRIPTION

This charming and characterful stone-built property, built in the 1940's, is situated in the peaceful rural commune of Sept-Forges, within the Orne department of Normandy. Positioned along the route from Domfront to the beautiful village of Lassay Les Chateaux, the house enjoys a quiet village setting typical of the region, offering both tranquillity and accessibility. With its traditional construction, slate roof, and authentic features, the property represents a classic example of Norman architecture, combining historical charm with practical living space and significant development potential.

Constructed in the classic regional style, the property features solid stone walls and a slate roof, reflecting the enduring architectural traditions of Normandy. Stone-built homes are particularly characteristic of western Normandy, where granite and other local materials have historically been used to create robust and long-lasting rural dwellings. These properties are highly sought after for their charm, durability, and connection to the region's cultural heritage.

This property represents not only a home but also an opportunity: a chance to restore, modernise, and personalise a traditional Norman residence while preserving its original character.

Sept-Forges is a small and peaceful commune located near the historic town of Domfront, an area known for its medieval architecture, natural beauty, and relaxed pace of life. The surrounding Orne countryside is widely appreciated for its green landscapes, forests, and outdoor activities, making it an ideal destination for both permanent living and holiday retreats.

Normandy itself is one of France's most diverse and attractive regions. It combines a rich historical...
