DESCRIPTION

Located in a peaceful and unspoilt setting in Plazac, a hidden gem of the Périgord Noir, this charming straw-bale house stands out for its eco-friendly architecture and its harmonious integration into the surrounding countryside.

Built in 2021, this unique property enjoys an ideal location surrounded by nature.

Offering approximately 78 m² of living space, the house features a bright and spacious open-plan living area with large openings to the outdoors. The accommodation comprises an open kitchen leading into the dining and living room (37 m²), a dedicated office area (15.4 m²), a comfortable bedroom (11 m²), and a shower room with WC (10 m²).

The large south-facing windows flood the interior with natural light throughout the day while offering beautiful views over the garden and surrounding countryside. Their orientation also provides valuable passive solar heating during the winter months.

The property benefits from a compliant septic system, a wood-burning stove, reversible air conditioning, and double glazing throughout.

Constructed with straw-bale walls, reinforced concrete support posts, and a living green roof, this home combines sustainability, comfort, and innovative design.

Set on over 2,600 m² of land, the property offers generous outdoor space ideal for relaxation, gardening, or developing a lifestyle project close to nature. Its tranquil setting and distinctive character make it a rare opportunity, whether as a primary residence, holiday retreat, or eco-living project.
